To Whom It May Concern:

I write this letter to recommend my friend and colleague, Brynn Schippert. I have worked together with Brynn on a regular basis for the better part of the year 2013.

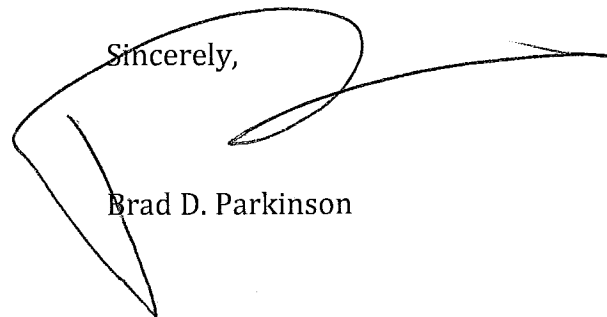

Brynn currently serves as the president of a group of young women in our church organization at Brigham Young University Idaho. She has been entirely responsible for organizing and directing the efforts of this group. She has two counselors and a secretary that assist in her presidency. She has selected several teachers that instruct the group on a weekly basis. There are young women who coordinate and plan social activities for the group and others assure that each young woman is visited in their apartment to determine overall health and spiritual well being. Brynn has been the leader of all such effort and activity.

We hold a planning and coordination meeting once a week. Brynn never misses and she is not late. She comes prepared and has knowledge of issues and concerns of each young woman in her group. There have been a few challenges and disappointments, but she faces them with a smile and with determination.

I have admired her ability to lead with conviction and compassion. She has taken care of her responsibility admirably, and has done this while being a full-time student.

I recommend Brynn without hesitation. She has shown the ability to be a responsible and effective leader and those under her umbrella know their roles and know what is expected of them. Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Brad D. Parkinson
